MAN MEETS DEATH IN CRASH IN COLMA

In a freak accident on El Camino highway in Colma, directly in front of the Union Oil Station No. 315, last Monday morning at 2:30 o'clock, one man was killed and three others were injured.

The dead man is Captain Edwin Maurits Green, of the pilot boat "Adventurer." Green was married less than a month ago and resided at 4316 Twenty-fith street, San Francisco.

A Ford sedan, driven by George Burke, of 916 Brunswick street, Daly City, traveling south at a high rate of speed, skidded on the shoulder gravel and struck an iron electric pole. Green, a passenger, and the owner of the car, was killed. Burke suffered a possible fracture of the skull, lacerations and bruises.

Emil Donati, driving another Ford car, was following Burke, also traveling at high rate of speed, and in an effort to avoid hitting the car in front of him, he swerved to the left, and lost control of his car, which turned over several times and came to a stop in the first lane, upside down.

Thomas Buchanan, of 95 Vendome avenue, Daly City, a passenger in Donati's car, was also injured.

A passing motorist took the four injured men to the Villa sanitarium, where Green was pronounced dead upon arrival. The remains were removed to the Lasswell undertaking establishment.

Buchanan suffered a fractured keencap, and Donati received minor cuts and injuries. According to Constable S. A. Landini, it was stated that Young Burke will be held on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Local N. R. A. Compliance Board Now in Full Swing

The local N. R. A. Compliance Board held their regular meeting on Tuesday, October 24, at 7:30 P. M., in the Council chambers in the City Hall. This committee has taken care of quite a number of cases where complaints of violation of the N. R. A. and P. R. A. code have been field. In each instance where a complaint has been filed, the committee has acted fairly and imparitally, and those involved in these complaints have assured the committee of their intention to live up to the agreement provided for in the N. R. A. code. In each case so far, those who were involved have expressed their admiration for the fair treatment they have received from the compliance board.

At 8 P. M. the general meeting was called and plans and more plans were discussed in regard to the proposed parade. Do your part, and Daly City will witness the most colorful and stupendous parade and mass meeting in its entire history.

The Jefferson Union high school auditorium has been acquired for the mass meeting which will be held on the night of November 7.

A communication was received from Washington, stating that where a state law provides for a minimum wage, and the N. R. A. gives a lower scale, the N. R. A. minimum wage shall not supersede the state law. Also that in regard to bakery workers the outside salesmen are exempt from the hour code.

Next Monday, October 30, the retail code goes into effect and becomes binding, regardless of whether the stores signed the N. R. A. Blue Eagle code or not. The only exceptions are the small town stores in towns of less than 2,500 population.

Get behind the President. Boost the N. R. A. Buy now, locally.

GOLD PRODUCERS FORM ASSOCIATION

Meeting at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco last Tuesday a number of the principal producers from the great gold mining areas of the West organized the "Gold Mining Association of America. "

On every hand were heard expressions of optimish and predictions of a great revival of the mining industry as a result of President Roosevelt's decision to establish a market for gold.

Brushing aside all technicalities and acting in accord, the gold producers rapidly assembled a constitution and by-laws to put their organization in "working order."

The objects of the association, as outlined in the meeting, will be to work for common legislative and protective benefits, stimulate gold production and improve conditions generally in the industry.

George W. Starr, president of the Mining Association of California, was chosen president of the new association and J. C. Kemp Vanee, secretary-terasurer. Charles Gilmore, Sacramento attorney and general counsel of the California association, presided at the meeting.

President Starr later announced three selections for the five-man executive committee. They were Charles H. Segerstrom, Sonora; Errol McBoyle, Grass Valley, and Cooley Butler, Los Angeles.

The membership of the association will include the leading gold producers of California, Nevada, Montana, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Oregon, Texas, and even British Columbia and the Philippine Islands. Representatives from each of these areas were present at the meeting, totaling about 250 persons.

The need for organization in the mining industry was outlined by several speakers, representative of large mining interests.

Congressman Harry L. Englebright, of Nevada City, stressed the need for concerted representation at Washington and assured the gold producers that President Roosevelt was well informed of the necessity of stimulating gold production.

Assurances of full co-operation in the objects of the association were expressed by Robert Palmer of the State Mining Association of Colorado; Julian Boyd of the Southwest Mining Association; former Governor Thomas E. Campbell of Arizona, former Senator Tasker L. Oddie of Nevada; Dr. Henry M. Payne, mining executive of Taos, N. M., and others.

Englebright, the principal speaker of the day, warned the mining men that they could no longer afford to pursue individual and indifferent courses about common problems and declared that the national organization was vitally necessary to work for the industry's protection and advantage at Washington.

COUNCIL TO HAVE SPECIAL MEETING

The principal business before the City Council meeting last Monday evening was the passage of the garbage collection ordinance, under which the city assumes control of garbage collection. The ordinance provides for the city letting a contract at 25 cents per household for all users of Daly City water within the city limts.

With about 2,700 water users to make use of this plan, it is estimated that the annual saving to the people of Daly City will be about $16,000.

The letting of a contract for the garbage collection will come before the Council on next Monday evening, October 30.

Other matters of importance and plans for the future which are of interest to every person in Daly City will be explained and discussed at this meeting. The meeting will be held in the Auditorium, so that there will be room for all.

The Council authorized Mayor H. H. Smith to prepare a notice and have it distributed to every home in Daly City, calling attention to this meeting, which should be of great interest to the taxpayers, and which every one should attend.

Enjoy Hallowe'en Party

Although a week ahead of time Grace Presbyterian C. E. Society enjoyed a thorough Hallowe'en party last Tuesday evening. Various costumes gave color to the party and the old-fashioned Hallowe'en games were again in evidence. The church parlors were gaily decorated for the occasion and the party was reported a great success. Young people of the community wishing to take part in the meetings are invited to attend Sunday evenings at 7.

'DEFENCE RALLY' PLANS COMPLETE

Each member of Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, has been appointed a "committee of one" to obtain at least two new recruits. This plan, devised by Commander L. W. Johnston, will result in an increased membership of about 100 as a contribution to the nation wide V. F. W. defence rally to be sponsored by that organization between November 11 and June 30, 1934.

In announcing the campaign plans for the local V. F. W. unit, the members have been advised that it was conceived by the newly elected Commander-in-Chief James E. Van Zant as the first step in a major counter attack against the forces working against the veteran and the government.

It is up to the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States to join with the other organizations for the repealing of the iniquitous acts of those responsible for the deplorable conditions now existing, with respect to the treatment of the disabled veteran, as well as the many injustices meted out to the small home owner and business man. It is our job, and unless we do it, it will not be done.

We want every veteran, those with service record out of the continental United States in time of war to join up with the V. F. W., but to those comrades who were compelled to remain in the states, join with an an organization to which they are eligible. Whatever organization you desire, but do join now. It is most important that the moral as well as the financial support be given at this time. Think it over, Comrades, think it over, and then "fall in."

Plans will be completed at the next meeting to be held by Old Glory Post, on Friday, October 28, for the installation of the newly elected officers of the Post. The Auxiliary will install their officers at the same time, and in all probability the installation will be a joint one.

Plans have been laid for the participation of Old Glory Post in the N. R. A. parade to be held in Daly City on November 7. From the work sheet drawn up, it will be the most impressive turnout in the history of the local unit. We sincerely hope that every organization will enter into this project with the spirit of the times and make it a huge success, and one that will bring the desired results. Let's all get together, and then pull. We cannot fail.

FRED R. LINSER, Adjutant.

MRS. ELIZABETH WITT SERIOUSLY INJURED

Mrs. Elizabeth Witt, a pioneer resident of Colma, is in St. Luke's hospital in a critical condition. Mrs. Witt was crossing Mission street at Market, in Colma, last Wednesday afternoon about 5:30 o'clock, when a truck driven by John Zgraggen, of Colma, an employe of the Excelsion Dairy, passed over both of her legs, crushing them.

Members of the Daly city police department removed the injured woman to the Villa Sanitarium, and she was later removed to St. Luke's hospital, where it was found necessary to amputated both injured members.

Zgraggen is being held by police, pending an investigation.

An application for a marriage license was filed in San Francisco last week by Clarence P. Gaudette, 27, of 129 Webster street, and Ida M. Thauberger, 23, of Daly City.

TANFORAN OPENS NEXT WEDNESDAY

Arrivals of important racing establishments from the East indicate high class thoroughbreds will be nominated for the nine stakes to be decided at the Fall meeting opening Wednesday, November 1.

The stakes program gives opportunity to both the fleetest members of the two year old division and of the mature band. Distance varying from five and one-half furlongs to the true test route of one mile and three-sixteenth, promise thrilling battles on the mile oval at the popular plant.

Announcement by General Manager Ralph C. MacArthur shows the stakes added values, distances and eligibility as to ages as follows:

Tanforan Inaugural Handicap, $1,-500 added. For all ages. Saturday, November 1. Five and a half furlongs. Entries close Saturday, October 28.

Juvenile Stakes, $2,000 added. For two year olds. Saturday, November 4. Spreckels course. Entries close Saturday, October 28.

Burlingame Handicap, $2,000 added. For all ages. Saturday, November 11. One mile and a sixteenth. Entries close Saturday, November 4.

Berkeley Handicap, $1,500 added. For all ages. Saturday, November 18. Spreckels course. Entries close Saturday, November 11.

Pleasanton Handicap, $3,000 added. For three year olds and upward. Saturday, November 25. One mile and a furlong. Entries close Saturday, November 18.

Del Monte Handicap. $2,000 added. For two year olds. Thursday, November 30. Spreckels course. Entries close Saturday, November 25.

Tanforan Handicap, $1,500 added. For all ages. Saturday, December 2. One mile and a sixteenth. Entries close Saturday, November 25.

Golden Gate Handicap, $1,500 added. For three year olds and upward. Saturday, December 9. One mile and a furlong. Entries close Saturday, December 2.

San Francisco Handicap, $5,000 added. For three year olds and upward. Saturday, December 16. One mile and three-sixteenths. Entries close Saturday, December 9.

The Tanforan management has announced that at the forthcoming meeting the general price of admission will be 40 cents. Admission to the Club House will be $1.00. These charges include the Federal Government tax. In accordance with the expressed desire of the California Racing Board, no complimentary badges will be issued for the meeting. For the accommodation of the patrons, ample parking space will be at their disposal, with no fee for the privilege.

With nominations for the Tanforan Inaugural Handicap to close on Saturday, conditioners are tightening up their candidates for the first feature of the season to open Wednesday, November 1. The Inaugural, at five and one-half furlongs, with $1,500 added, will attract track burners owned by leading breeders. Seldom has a stakes at the popular course held more promise than this Fall's Inaugural.

The Meadowbrook Stable's Bonny Grafton, the Pasadena Stable's On Rush, John D. Spreckels III's Quickaway, J. W. Marchbank's Prince Heather, C. A. Hartwell's Hueu and Kapena, D. J. Davis' Tea Trader, H. A. Crowell's Las Palmas, Alexander Pantages' Sharp Thoughts and other fleet ones appear to be approaching the fitness that will make them factors in the struggle on the racing strip.

N. W. Church's Sundot scored in the Lone Star Handicap at Arlington Downs on the opening day of the Texas track and plans are under way for his shipment, with eleven others, to Tanforan. In the event of Sundot coming on for the Tanforan Inaugural he will be a hard horse to conquer. The Church owned galloper was never better than at present.

Quickaway possesses remarkable speed and trainer Henry Walters is confident of getting the well known flyer to the post in the best of condition. The son of the noted Whiskaway has been galloping in a promising manner on the home course up at the Walters ranch in Oregon and apparently only needs a bit more "work" to bring him to the height of form. This fellow will have plenty of friends when saddled for his first outing.

Prince Heather has put on a bit of flesh since last seen here in action and trainer Kay Spence can be depended upon to have it hard, with the Heather Farm bred runner fit in other ways as well as for the opening tussle. Ted Horning was at the fairs in the summer months and his string, including Las Palmas, are near racing shape.

MINING ACTIVITY PEPS UP SPIRITS

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Novel tonics for anyone depressed by the apparently slow return to normalcy have been suggested by a number of keen observers of the trend of events. One of the most popular suggestions is to take a trip into the flourishing Cariboo district in British Columbia. A visit to the "humming hive of industry", as the northern region has been characterized, is declared to work wonders on one's mental outlook, invariably giving the visitor the brightest slant on world recovery.

Graphic accounts of the conditions in the Cariboo are furnished by well known residents of British Columbia. In talking to a representative of the Vancouver Sun, A. K. McLean recently said:

"The gold excitement is at a fever heat. No matter how lackadaisical the market may be, the people of Barkerville are busy gold mining. The town itself is a typical mining camp, with the population talking, dreaming and thinking of nothing but gold.

"If people outside could visualize what is happening in the Cariboo the whole country would be talking about its future. Anyone who will go into the Lowhee Gulch, the big placer proposition which is producing atop Cariboo Gold Quartz property, and see the veins which have been cut and the big mineralized boulders which are being washed down, must have faith in the lode gold possibilities of the Cariboo Quartz. The thousands of dollars worth of gold being recovered by the hydraulic process prove beyond the shadow of doubt the tremendous future of the mining operations."

Thomas Nixon Carver, professor emeritus of political economy at Harvard University, inclines to the opinion that if there is additional inflation in the United States it will take the form of a devaluated dollar. He points out in an article in the New York Herald-Tribune that Governments in the past have not infrequently resorted to the policy of melting down old coins and recoining the metal in coins of smaller size or lower quality, an easy way out of financial difficulties.

Professor Carver says:

"Our government, having repudiated its promise to redeem paper dollars in gold dollars of the old size and quality, may begin redeeming them in gold dollars of smaller size. Instead of defining a dollar at 25.8 grains of gold, nine-tenths fine, it would define it as consisting of 20 grains, 18 grains, 16 grains, or whatever number of grains would create the least dissatisfaction. The smaller the number of grains, the better it would suit the inflationists, but the worse it would be for the owners of all insurance policies, savings accounts, bonds, pension rights, and the receivers of all salaries and wages. Neither side would be satisfied. The government, once having tampered with the gold content of the dollar, might be induced to do it again if enough pressure could be brought to bear upon it. There is likely to be pressure."

Harry Hammond, publisher of the always readable Byron Times, recently reprinted one of these columns, entitled "Higher Price for Gold Seen." Thank you, Friend Harry.

Church of the Nazarene Silver Jubilee Anniversary

The year of 1933 marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Church of the Nazarene, dating from the organic union of the three original bodies at Pilotpoint, Texas, in 1908.

Although comparatively young in years, the Church of the Nazarene, which on October 29 begins the celebration of its Silver Jubilee anniversary, has a record of outstanding achievement since the merger of a quarter of a century ago.

So, for five Sundays, Nazarene churches all over the country, as well as those in foreign lands, will have special programs. October 29 will be "rally day," culminating with an attendance of 200,000 in the Sunday schools, according to the Rev. J. M. Gill, pastor of the Grace Church of the Nazarene.

After the union in October, 1908, of the three bodies now comprising the Church of the Nazarene, the total membership amounted to 10,414, with 606 ministers and 228 churches. Now the membership is well over 100,000; there are 3,335 ministers and 1,861 churches.

The first Nazarene church was founded by the late Dr. Phineas F. Bresee at Los Angeles, Cal., in October, 1895. His zeal as a revivalist and as an evangelist became known throughout Southern California after he had served in other pastorates elsewhere. Dr. Breese desired to start a church in the heart of Los Angeles, where he could preach to poor. In October, 1895, Dr. Breese and a group of friends rented a hall on South Main street, and it was here that the Church of the Nazarene was born. The founder died in 1915.

At the Rally Day service, October 29, Rev. J. M. Gill, the local pastor, hopes to have 200 present in Sunday school. Every one is cordially invited to attend these Silver Jubilee anniversary services.

Lacking a sounding board productive of pure, even tones, a new violin is equipped wth a small electro-magnetic pick-up concealed under the instrument's bridge.

TANFORAN TO GET CREAM OF RACERS

Norman W. Church, whose horses have won important stakes on the big tracks of the country, promises to have a formidable string in the racing to open at Tanforan, Wednesday, November 1. The first of the Church thoroughbreds to arrive will be four clever ones that have been rested up at Mira Stock Farm, San Jose, following the close in the Spring at Tanforan.

Somewhat later, twelve gallopers will be shipped from Arlington Downs, Texas, to Tanforan, according to the announced plans of the stable. In the Texas band are such well known runners as Sundot, Riskulus, Ima Count, and others that are always seen under colors in features.

Owner Church sometime back purchased a large farm south of Mira Monte, the latter being owned by A. K. Macomber and under lease to its present occupant. Fashionably bred yearlings, most of them by the well known stallion Toto, are the nucleus for the nursery to be established at the new place. In all probability the stakes winners, Plucky Play and Gallant Sir, will be stock horses at the Church haras.

Whenever dilating on the blood lines of one of our California bred winners it is with realization that without Western nurseries turning out thoroughbreds of sufficient quality to hold their own with the runners from the East—bred in Kentucky, Maryland, Virginia, New York and other states—racing could not be conducted on a sporting plane. It is the competition between Western and Eastern horses that makes the sport worth while. Some time ago Thomas B. Cromwell, publisher and editor of the high class weekly "The Blood Horse" quoted favorably from these "releases" the statement that interest in the blood lines of the thoroughbred is increasing by leaps and bounds out this way. As an expert, Editor Cromwell realizes breeding is the only real foundation for racing.

With more than one California breeder "looking around" in Australia for horses that might improve the strains in this state, the coming of Winooka some months ago, with his first race on the American continent being run at Tanforan, is taking on more importance as time goes on. Probably no runners of Winooka's years but yearlings and two year olds will be shipped from Australia before long.

The other day at Laurel, Trevallion, which came over on the Monterey with Winooka, ran a promising race in muddy footing. Trevaillon apparently is only reaching his top form. Of a sluggish disposition, Edgar Britt punished the imported gelding severely the last part of the race to bring him in third.

Midshipman, a three year old owned by Kay Spence, possesses quality and may return to the form at Tanforan that enabled him to score in the Agua Caliente Derby last winter. This chestnut gelding is by the well known High Cloud, and apparently is rounding to under the attention given by his clever handler. His last appearance under colors was at Longacres after quite a let-up. The class of the three year old was shown by his victory over Gay World, Bamboula, and other good ones at the border course. Gay World won features on important tracks during the summer and has been mentioned frequently as a possible opponent for Winooka in special races.

Midshipman's sire is a steady stallion when it comes to sending out winners. High Cloud is getting along in years, but his blood, that of the potent Domino-Ben Brush cross, encourages owners of fashionably bred matrons to send them to his court.

The Spence galloper is from a mare by Sir Martin, and that breeding could not be improved. Go back over the years and certain stock horses are found to be more famous for the daughters they have sired than the sons, notably Macaroni, Meddler, Goldfinch and Sain. Nowadays Sir Martin is mentioned often as a broodmare sire.

Proud Hills, California bred three year old in Charley Irby's Tranquility Stable, likes the Tanforan course and may be expected to do more here than in recent weeks on Eastern tracks. As the name indicates, Proud Hills is by Langdon Hills, which will be recalled as winner of the Metropolitan Handicap in England. The bay gelding can carry his speed one mile and a sixteenth or more.

"Clockers" report On Rush is going along in a clever way and undoubtedly will be sent out under colors in the Inaugural by Trainer Lester Lee, if things turn out as expected in the next week. The grandson of Sweep is well known principally because of his match with Winooka at Longacres. Hueu, a local thoroughbred that tried to subdue Winooka last summer at Tanforan looks like a threat in the Inaugural.

Tea Trader has turned in promising gallops and may be a danger even if Sundot shows up.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

(By the Journalism Class.)

Last Friday the Jefferson Indians defeated the South City Boilermakers 7-0. The Boilermakers showed a good goal line defence by stopping the Indians three times. But the Indians were a wee bit stronger and pushed over the lone score of the game. The Jefferson pass attack was quite effective, with two long passes which were exceptional. Roy Burns made a name for himself by making long runs, catching passes, and being a good all around star. Roy Beecher, Jefferson captain, took the ball over standing for the touchdown and the conversion was made by a pass. Jim Swan was one of the mainstays of the Jefferson line by smearing plays and making good tackles. Leo Cortesi and McPherson were the stars of South City, the former making good line bucks and end runs, while the latter was a defensive star.

Today Jefferson plays Santa Clara on the local gridiron, with Jefferson having the advantage. Last year the Indians defeated Santa Clara. With the new found spirit, the game today promise a good money's worth.

Students in public speaking and journalism will make up a theater party this evening and attend a performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the President Theater. Mr. Saiz is the instructor in these subjects and he is sponsoring the party. Among those making reservations are: Misses Anderson, Benner, Denevi, Hicks, Hurlbut, McKeown, Oakley and Twesten; also Messrs. Dowdell, Castellano, Prongas and Grantham.

Miss Kathleen Caine, of the class of 32, and Mantell H. Monson, formerly of Logan, Utah, were married on Sunday, October 5. The ceremony was performed by Mr. Clive M. Saiz, a former teacher of Mrs. Monson.

Last Friday the students were called together to pep up for the South City-Jefferson game. The students showed fine spirit in the rally and deserve to be congratulated.

Coach Bigsg started off the assembly by giving a short pep talk. Yells for the team were led by Leo Becker. Louise Rushing and Roselyn Rossenberg gave dances—Louise an acrobatic and Roselyn a tap. Emily del Sarto played a march on the accordion, accompanied by Alois Lang on the piano and Bill Kelly playing on the piano.

Mrs. Songer presented awards to the Senior girls who won the volley ball championship. Those who received awards were: Janet Marsh, Mary Bertocchi, Rena Guisti, Berta Ford, Myrtle Dougherty, Gladys Oakley, and Jean Benner.

Mr. Ferguson made an announcement concerning a playlet intended for the assembly, but which, due to illness on the part of one of the girls, would have to be given some other time.

Report from members of Chapter 194 who attended the C. S. F. District Council at Mission high school on October 14, were very favorable, and, according to the delegation sent, the conference was a complete success. Those who attended were Juanita Merlo, Leila Silacci, Muriel Wittmer, and Miss tSaib. Altogether practically 120 members attended from twenty district schools.

A welcoming speech by Mr. Drew, principal of Mission high school, was followed by a short entertainment for the delegation by several talented students belonging to the Mission Chapter. An address was made by Mr. Wieland of the History department on "Changing America."

During the luncheon speeches were made by alumi of Occidental and Dominican College and as a closing, Lester Malloy, official announcer of C. S. F. programs broadcast over KYA, addressed the delegation.

The conference adjourned at 2:00, with everyone feeling that his time had been spent profitably.

GILL KIN WOULD BREAK WILL BENEFITTING HOUSEKEEPER

Three separate attempts to break the will of the late Hohn Gill, former Daly City resident. which left an estate purported to exceed $50,000 to his housekeeper, Mabel Greer, were launched in Redwood City superior court this week.

One contest was filed by three sisters of the deceased, another by a divorced wife of Gill, and a third contest by a daughter and granddaughter of Gill's second wife, whose death preceded his.

Two days before his death, on March 21, Gill wrote a will cutting off his three sisters, and leaving the sum of $1 to any one contesting his will. He left the entire estate to his housekeper and named Augusta Burkett as the executrix.

The contests are identical in their allegations. They charge that Gill was incompetent and of "unsound mind" when he wrote his will, and that he was "dominated, influenced and swayed" by his housekeeper.

SECTION 2: (a) The general term "refuse" shall mean all matter and materials which are rejected by the owners or producers thereof as offensive or useless and which, by their presence and accumulation, may injuriously affect the health, comfort or safety of the community by increasing disease or hazard by fire.

SECTION 6: It shall be unlawful to deposit or bury any refuse, garbage or other waste material within the city limits of Daly City or within four hundred (400) yards thereof, provided, however, that rubbish and waste matter may be made use of when leveled and properly covered, and upon written permission of the health officer, for the filling in of low lots within the city limits.

SECTION 7: It shall be unlawful for any person to burn any refuse on any street, public or private lot or park, or in any place within the City of Daly City, provided that the provisions of this section shall not be applied to burning of dry rubbish by the producer thereof between the hours of nine o'clock in the morning and five o'clock in the afternoon of any day if said dry rubbish in burning shall not create a dense smoke or offensive odor, but in no event shall such rubbish be burned on any paved street.

SECTION 8: It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association to collect refuse, garbage and/or other waste matter within the City of Daly City or transport the same through the streets of the city except as in this ordinance hereinafter provided; except, however, that the provisions of this ordinance shall not apply to collectors of swill from restaurants operating within the City of Daly City.

Persons residing within the City of Daly City and not obtaining water from the Water Department of the City of Daly City are hereby required to comply with the terms of this ordinance and shall be individually liable for the collection charges made by the garbage collector.

SECTION 12: The health officer shall have power to establish rules and regulations not inconsistent with the ordinance governing the collection and disposal of refuse and garbage, provided that such rules and regulations shall have as their purpose the enforcement of the provisions of this ordinance and the health and sanitary laws and ordinances in effect in the City of Daly City.

SECTION 14: The City Council of the City of Daly City shall have the power and by this ordinance is hereby given the power to contract for the removal of refuse, garbage and other waste matter within the City of Daly City, subject to and in accordance with the terms of this ordinance, to any responsible person qualified to remove said refuse, garbage or other waste matter, in accordance herewith and subject to the inspection and direction of the public health officer of said city. If the City Council of the City of Daly City elects, under the provisions of this section, to contract for the removal of refuse, garbage and other waste material with any responsible person, said contract shall provide that the contractor shall have the exclusive right to collect and dispose of refuse, garbage and other waste matter in the City of Daly City under the terms of this ordinance and subject to the supervision of the health officer of said city. Said contractor shall be required to furnish a surety bond to the City of Daly City in sums satisfactory to the City Council of said city, which bond shall be conditioned upon the faithful performance of the contract and the provisions of this ordinance.

Said contract shall further provide that said contractor shall be required to dispose of all refuse, garbage and other waste matter in a manner not in violation of the terms of this ordinance and subject to the approval of the health officer of said city.

Said contract shall also require that said contractor procure and keep in full force and effect at all times during his or their operation under the terms of said contract full compensation insurance with insurance carriers as defined by and in accordance with the provisions of the act of the Legislature of the State of California known as the "Workmens' Compensation Act," approved May 26, 1913, as amended.

Said contract shall also require that said contractor, during any of his or their operations under said contract, carry public liability insurance to the extent of Twenty Thousand ($20,000.00) Dollars for the death or injury of one person and Forty Thousand ($40,000.00) Dollars for the death or injury of more than one person, and property damage insurance to the extent of Five Thousand ($5,000) Dollars on each of the trucks or other vehicles used by him or them in carrying out the work called for under said contract, such insurance to cover both the City of Daly City and the contractor.

The City Council of the City of Daly City is hereby authorized to enter into a contract with any responsible person, firm or corporation for the collection of refuse, garbage and/or other waste matter for any period of time, not exceeding, however, five years.

The City Council of the City of Daly City, by resolution, shall have the power for the inclusion in said contract of such terms as it deems necessary to protect the interests of the City of Daly City in addition to the terms hereinabove and in this section required.

SECTION 15: Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than Three Hundred ($300.00) Dollars or by imprisonment for not more than three (3) months, or by both such fine or imprisonment.

SECTION 16: If any section, sentence, clause or phrase of this ordinance is for any reason held to be unconstitutional or invalid, said decision shall not affect the validity of the remaining portion of this ordinance. The City Council hereby declares that it would have passed this ordinance and each section, sentence, clause and phrase thereof irrespective of the fact that any one or some other sections, sentences, clauses or phrases be declared unconstitutional or invalid.

SECTION 17: This ordinance is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety, within the meaning of Section 1 of Article IV of the Constitution, and shall go into effect immediately.

The following is a statement constituting such necessity.

The City of Daly City at the present time has no regulatory ordinance sufficiently and properly regulating the collection and disposal of garbage within said city; that garbage within said city is not collected regularly and is not kept in sealed containers and is allowed to accumulate in exposed places where rodents, flies and other disease carriers have access thereto; that as a result thereof the public health of the inhabitants of the City of Daly City is in danger and it is necessary to effect some immediate control of this situation for the preservation of the health of the inhabitants of said city; that it is essential that this ordinance take effect immediately in order that measures by duly authorized officers may be commenced forthwith. The regulation herein contemplated is deemed imperative by the City Council for the preservation of the peace, health and safety of the inhabitants of said city.

Introduced this 9th day of October, 1933.

Passed and adopted as an ordinance of the City of Daly City the 23rd day of October, 1933, by the following vote:

AYES, and in favor thereof, Councilmen: Selmi, Sundermann, Twesten, Smith.

That "hell hath no fury like a woman scorned" was again demonstrated at Vrasta, Bulgaria, the other day when a jilted sweetheart interrupted a marriage ceremony. The press dispatch said that "stung by sight of her former lover marrying another, she rushed at the bride and tore off her veil and wedding gown with such violence that only a quick huddle by the bridesmaids prevented a Lady Godiva scene." The infuriated girl was hustled away, however, and the wedding proceeded.

New Bayshore Link Soon to be Started

Extension of the Bayshore highway another 2.7 miles will be under way soon, it is learned from Sacramento, where highway officials said bids will be opened on the new link November 1. The paving will be 40 feet wide.

This stretch will bring the new highway to within two and a half miles of San Jose. The construction will cost about $100,000, it is estimated.

FOODS THAT ARE EASILY DIGESTED

Some Are More Efficient Than Others.

By EDITH M. BARBER

I OFTEN find persons, quite often me by the way, much concerned as to whether certain foods are "digestible." Certain foods have a bad reputation as far as digestion is concerned, and it is sometimes ill deserved. Actually all foods eventually digest. Some of them are more efficient than others, that is to say, of the many foods that we eat, we utilize almost completely all of the nutritive qualities.

We do not use quite such a high percentage of vegetables and fruits particularly as far as their protein content is concerned. Should we improbably confine ourselves to a purely vegetable diet excluding not only meat but eggs and milk, we would need to take a larger amount of protein daily than we would if we depended upon a mixed diet. Ordinarily when most people talk about the digestibility of foods, they really are concerned with the rapidity of digestion. Normal digestion goes on at a moderate rate. It may be delayed somewhat by eating too fast, by eating an abnormal amount of food or by some disturbance of the gastric juices which prevents the formation of the usual amount of acid which is needed to prepare the food for passage into the intestines.

Digestion is sometimes too rapid because an excess amount of this acid is formed and food passes so quickly into the intestines that the digestive juices have not had the opportunity to do their part. If food is delayed in digestion too long, putrefactive products will form in larger amounts than usual and certain poisons may be absorbed in the blood stream. Where there is too little acid in the stomach, bacteria which would usually be killed by this acid remain alive and allow putrefaction. All bacteria in the digestive tract, however, are not harmful—in fact, they are necessary to the well-being of the body as some of them protect the digestive tract from the ravages of harmful bacteria. It is estimated that each day the food which we eat is acted upon by over 100,000,000,000 bacteria. The most important bacillus, perhaps, is the acidopholus which has the function of aiding to pertain healthful conditions in the intestines. On of the well-known remedies for intestinal disturbance is acidopholus milk with which is usually taken lactose and dextrose. Together these have the ability to "change the flora" of the intestinal tract.

The person in normal health who eats food of good quality, avoiding overripe fruits and vegetables and meats which have the slightest taint, whose diet is prepared under cleanly conditions, should digest a normal variety of food practically completely in the normal time. As was stressed in a nutrition article recently, the amount of roughage furnished by vegetables, fruits and whole grains is a factor in keeping the rate of digestion normal for most persons. Foods which have high content of vitamin B including yeast and the wheat germ, seem to have specific qualities in aiding digestion. If digestion is too fast, there are likely to be "hunger" pangs which are really appetite pangs which are caused by the emptying of the stomach. In this case it is well to take food often or even to drink water to fill up the empty stomach. The favorite remedy in most households—"baking soda" is harmless taken in normal quantities when there is an excess of acid which may cause pain. Hydrochloric acid is often recommended by physicians where digestion is delayed and where there is the consequent gas which is caused by fermentation of food. If your digestion is not normal, consult a physician, because sometimes you may mistake the cause of your symptoms and increase your discomfort by the wrong remed

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Gene Byrnes was telling of the golf professional at a mountain summer resort who charged $10 an hour for lessons. His rule was that at the first lesson, the pupil bring his clubs along so that he might inspect them. He'd begin with the driver, look at it long and earnestly and finally announce that it was fit only for the junk heap. "But I'll sell you a good one," he'd add. Then he'd pick up the brassy and after due deliberation announce that it was worth nothing at all but that he'd see that his pupil would get one with which shots could be made. So he would go through the entire bag, giving each club a most careful examination and condemning them all. "In other words," continued Byrnes, "he'd take an hour and ten minutes to sell the pupil a new set of clubs. But he never made any charge for the extra ten minutes."

Then Grantland Rice came forward with the story of the professional down South. That particular pro's system was to inform his pupils that the way to learn to play golf was to observe an expert make shots and then try to imitate him. Putting his pupil in a comfortable chair, he would start by making drives. He'd allow the pupil a shot or two but would get in a good hour's practice for which he was well paid. That continued for two seasons. Then the squawks became so numerous that the pro finally lost his job.

Some way or other, I can't seem to get out of my mind this ad from the "Public Notices" column of the Herald-Tribune: "Man for sale, $950 cash; full two-year servitude; cultured, Christian, unencumbered, forty-seven; drive, nurse, gardener, housework, anything, anywhere."

In the Belvedere Towers meteorological observatory in Central park is a thermometer with the mercury tube painted black, while the thermometer itself is suspended in a vacuum tube. It is used for determining the full burning effect of the sun, the black paint absorbing the rays and the vacuum minimizing the cooling effect of breezes. Fortunately for all of us human beings, so I was told, never get the full effect of the sun, the body being cooled by breezes and by the evaporation of perspiration. But the last time I looked at that black bulb thermometer, it showed 142 degrees and though perspiring freely, I felt even hotter than that.

A well-known short-story writer—nameless here at his own request—is still puzzling over a happening of a week ago. With the dead line for a story only a week ahead, he found himself as barren as a clay pit, and the more he searched for a suitable plot, the more hopeless his plight seemed to become. Wornout, he went to bed sometime after midnight only to be awakened an hour or so later by a dream so vivid that he sprang out of bed and stumbled into his study. Fearing details would escape him, he began to type notes hurriedly.

Just as he was finishing, his wife, aroused by the typewriter, came in to see why he was working at such an hour. He had dreamed a plot, he told her, that exactly fitted his needs, even the characters being clear and distinct. With a thrill of excitement, he outlined it to her. When he had concluded, she looked at him strangely. Then she asked him if he had read a magazine that had come in the mail the day before. He replied that he had been too busy to even look at it. "That's queer," said his wife. "You've outlined to me the story I read in that magazine before I dropped off to sleep."

AMERICAN ANIMALS

GRAY FOX

ON MOONLIGHT nights when bullfrogs croak,
And crickets chirp beneath the oak,
The gray fox steals on silent feet
To hunt for field mice in the wheat.

If he should chance to cross the trail
Of squirrel, rabbit, dove or quail,
Of course he'd stop to sniff around
And listen for the slightest sound.

But if his prey he fails to catch
He'll seek a huckle-
berry patch;
Or find some other
fruit to eat;
He does not always live on meat.

The gray fox looks
so smart and sly,
With pointed nose
and cunning eye,
That if he came around at night
I'd lock my hen house good and tight!

BEAUTY TALKS

By MARJORIE DUNCAN

THE "OFF-DAYS"

SPASMODIC negligence is step-sister to chronic carelessness. Both are inexcusable in the matter of one's personal appearance. Both pay the same price. Groom yourself perfectly for 360 days in the year, and let the world see you careless the other 5. What happens? You are judged—or rather misjudged (if you want it that way) by your off-days. You look lovely most frequently—you are listless seldom—yet it is the "seldom" that everyone seems to notice.

Connie found that out. She confided to me the other day that she would never, never venture forth, even to the grocer's around the corner, without "fixing and fussing as though going to a dinner-dance." Connie ordinarily is quite careful about her appearance. Occasionally, however, she has an off-day. She reasons thus, "Oh, well, I don't have any special engagements—I don't expect to meet anyone today—and I'm just going out for a short time.

"So I slipped out of the house and on to the store and even the grocer's cat seemed to stare at me. I caught a fleeting reflection of myself in the mirror and it was none too flattering. Right then and there I had a premonition. On my way home I talked to myself, expressing over and over again the hope that I would not have the misfortune of meeting anyone. And then—curses—if I didn't walk straight into the one person in the whole world whom I wished least to see at that moment."

Connie must have wished as so many of us often do that a magic potion for making us invisible would be invented. However, that little incident changed Connie's regime to one of systematic precision. No more spasms of negligence. She is always a picture of perfect grooming.

Connie's sad little experience reminds me of a lovely lady I know who is really a brilliant housekeeper. On the one and only day that she failed to make the beds and straighten up (because she felt indisposed) the fates conspired against her. She had more unexpected visitors in an hour—that day—than she usually has in a week. It's the experience of every woman—seems to me.

Remember the wrinkle makers. Constant frowning, scowling, a despondent and morose disposition. Too sudden reduction without compensating skin care takes away the fatty underlining, but the skin that has been stretched to accommodate it falls into folds and wrinkles. Remember that worrying over the wrinkles will often make matters worse. And remember, too, that your youth did not die in a day, the wrinkles worked their way into face and neck—a little yesterday, a little the day before, over perhaps years without your knowing it. Don't expect them to leave in a day or a month. Be patient and you will be rewarded with youth regained.

FEMININITY SUPREME

WE ALL remember the post-war days. Feminine faces suddenly gone masculine. Softly curving figures taking on a mannish straightness. Feminine locks snipped shorter and shorter. Then the ridiculous extremes in eyebrows. First a heavy, unruly mass, then the pencil-like, expressionless arch. And make-up anything but the happy medium. Rouge applied too boldly and heavily or completely omitted. Lips shaped so unnaturally and rouged so highly that they smacked of boldness bordering on vulgarity. Too much—entirely too much of the extreme, the eccentric, the masculine. Femininity was locked in fashion's attic closet. The beauty-wise mourned her. To them she seemed too long lost.

Now fashion has released her once more. And our new-found femininity is lovelier than ever. No cobwebs have attached themselves to her. She has not suffered by the long absence. And we women—what a welcome we are giving her! Absence does make the heart grow fonder, doesn't it?

Look around you. On all sides you see ladies—lovely ladies. Gone are the flappers, the boyish bob, the bored air and ennui. Complexions are all aglow with a newer loveliness. A saner and healthier attitude is being taken on the subject of the figure. Extreme thinness is not stressed to the extent it was a year or two ago. Figures are taking on the rounded curves, the graceful, slender line that feminine figures should naturally wear. And bodies are going to be the healthier and lovelier for it. As for milady's hair, once more it comes into its own, once more it is truly "woman's crowning glory." The shingled boyish bob grows longer and longer until it reaches at least two inches, and sometimes four inches below the ears. The soft, flattering wavelets that were brushed back from the forehead and behind the ears and then chased under confining little hats are once more called forth. The one redeeming feature of the short cut, however, remains. I have reference to the thinning process. Hair grows longer, but not heavier. We discovered that the shape of most feminine heads is really beautiful. So the coiffure is still thinned to reveal the lovely contours of the head. Straight hair is taboo. It's feminine to have curly locks.

"Crank"

THERE are many kinds of "cranks," or, as Bernard Shaw might say, as many kinds of cranks as there are humans.

Everybody knows that the word "crank" used in this connection is applied to a person who is peculiar or eccentric. Originally, however, it was applied to a person with set notions.

It was on that account that Donn Piatt coined the term, using it metaphorically in reference to the crank of a barrel organ which plays the same tunes over and over again.

Donn Piatt, it is said, applied the word "crank" in this sense, to Horace Greeley.

AN AMERICAN SOLDIER

General John J. Pershing, now 73 years old, has had perhaps the most remarkable career of any American soldier of his generation, and although retired from the Army since 1924 is still active as chairman of the American battle monuments commission.

Born in Linn county, Missouri, he was graduated from West Point in 1886, gained his first actual battle experience the same year in the Apache Indian campaign. He served in the Sioux war of 1890-91, in the Santiago campaign of 1898, and distinguished himself in successful campaigns against the Moros in the Philippines, for which he was promoted from Captain to Brigadier-General.

He commanded the expedition sent into Mexico in pursuit of Villa in 1916, and at the outbreak of the World war was placed in command of the American Epeditionary Forces in France. For his distinguished services in the war he was made General of the Armies of the United States, a rank created for him by Congress in 1919. He also received the highest military decorations from all the Allied nations.

General Pershing's life has been marked by many hardships and at least one great sorrow. His wife and three children were burned to death in a fire at the Presidio of San Francisco, on August 27, 1915, while he was absent from the post on duty. Mrs. Pershing was the daughter of Senator Warren of Wyoming.

During his long career General Pershing has served his country with extraordinary distinction, and his fellow citizens will wish for him many more years in which to enjoy the well-earned honors which have been bestowed upon him.

FIGHT ALIMONY RACKET

Several Chicago men, who apparently suffer from the pangs of alimony, are seeking to promote a new society, to be known as the Alimony Club of America. Judging from its professed aims, it might be more appropriately called an anti-alimony club. Anyway, among its objects, as stated in the articles of incorporation, is this: "To protect men and society generally against the so-called modern woman who considers marriage a mere step incident to a suit for divorce, that she may engage in the business of collecting alimony."

If the new organization could guarantee that this object was possible of attainment there would probably be a grand rush of alimony victims, eager to enroll under its banner.

AMERICAN RAILROADS

The year 1930 marked the one hundredth anniversary of the first regularly operated steam railroad in the United States, the Baltimore and Ohio, which in 1930 was only thirteen miles long. Other construction under way brought the total for the country to twenty-three miles that year. By 1840 the mileage had increased to 2,818, and extensions were made with increasing rapidity during the succeeding years. When the railroad was 50 years old, in 1880, the United States had 93,671 miles.

The ten years between 1880 and 1890 was the greatest period of railroad building. American roads built during that decade totalled 71,983 miles. The greatest railroad mileage was reached in 1916, when 254,251 miles were in operation.

Since 1916, owing to the abandonment of a number of unprofitable short lines, the mileage has been actually reduced, being now about 249,300 miles. At present new construction is almost entirely limited to adding a second, third or even fourth track to existing lines.

One of the most striking developments in railroads has been the increase in the size of locomotives. From a weight of less than five tons 100 years ago, they have been built larger and larger until today many passenger locomotives weigh 150 tons or more, while those used in freight transportation range as high as 220 tons or more. A few special types exceed 400 tons.

With the growing competition of the automobile, truck and airplane, it is impossible to predict what the next century of railroading may bring forth. It is safe to predict, however, that for heavy freight transportation the railroad will hold first place for many years to come.

OUR CHANGING WORLD

Selecting a trade or occupation today is a rather more serious matter than in years gone by, owing to the rapid changes in methods of manufacture and in the products demanded by the public.

In hardly any line of manufacture does one know how soon some new method or process may render all his present skill useless as a means of gaining a livelihood. Highly skilled hand craftsmen in many lines are continually being replaced by machinery, while products which were formerly in great demand are rapidly becoming obsolete, such as the buggy and other horse-drawn vehicles.

Speaking from the manufacturer's standpoint, E. W. McCullough, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said: "I could enumerate a hundred lines of business this evolution has wiped out, and lines without number have changed in materials, construction and form."

These changes have affected the individual workmen, as well as their employers, and never were changes made so rapidly as at present. Those who enter the mechanical trades must be prepared to adapt themselves to new conditions as they arise.

WITHOUT A PRESIDENT

It may not be generally known that every four years the United States is without a President for several hours, but such is the fact. The term of the outgoing President expires at midnight on March 3, and the new President is usually sworn in about noon on the following day. During the intervening hours the country is without a chief executive.

The question of whether a vacancy existed during this interval was discussed early in the history of the country. In response to an inquiry, Chief Justice John Marshall wrote, on February 21, 1821:

"There has been uniformly and voluntarily an interval of twelve hours during which the executive power could not be exercised."

If an emergency demanded, the new President could be sworn in immediately after his predecessor's term expired at midnight on March 3, but no situation ever existed to make this necessary.

OBNOXIOUS BILLBOARDS

In spite of the widely advertised "code of ethics" adopted some time ago by the billboard promoters, their habit of defacing the landscape and encroaching upon residential sections has by no means been abandoned.

Public sentiment has been so aroused in opposition to the billboard nuisance that a national committee for the restriction of out-door advertising is making a vigorous campaign against the unsightly sign-boards which glare at one on every hand.

Among the organizations co-operating with this committee are the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Garden Clubs of America, the National Conference of State Parks, the American Society of Landscape Architects, historical societies, automobile associations, nature societies and others interested in the preservation of outdoor beauty.

Appeals are being made to advertisers direct, it being pointed out that an offensive advertising sign makes ill-will for the advertiser and tends to hurt rather than help his business.

The book "Why We Behave Like Human Beings" had a big sale in spite of the fact that most of us don't.

The Hitler regime in Germany has been burning books. The question is, did they burn the right ones?

With the daylight saving foolishness over for awhile, we may be able to figure out what the time really is.

A paragrapher says that 5 per cent of the people do the thinking, while the other 95 per cent do the work. But thinking is the hardest work most people do, if any.

The Boston Herald suggests that we all pull together to get out of the depression, but that each shouldn't try to pull his neighbor's leg too hard just now.

Increase in Building

According to data on building activity, compiled by the analysis and research department of the Bank of America, the cumulated building permits for the first nine months of 1933 in sixty cities of eight far western states amounted to $87,162,901, and was 61.3 per cent ahead of the cumulated totals of the corresponding period of 1932, reflecting largely the increase in public projects.

WE BACK UP

—This statement with facts: that statistics from the Census Department shows that the average number in an American family is four and one-fifth. We wonder if the one-fifth is father.

Another statement we'll back up is: that if we do the repair work on your car that it won't be done like a schoolboy washes his ears—we'll make a thorough job of it; and when we start on your job we don't waste our time looking for a wrench and then try to find a nut to fit the wrench.

NEW RIDGE ROUTE OPENS FOR TRAVEL

California's alternate Ridge Route, costing $2,900,000 and shortening the distance between San Francisco and Los Angeles by 9.6 miles, will be officially opened for travel next Sunday, October 29.

The new highway, which will supersede the present Ridge Route, one of the most hazardous and difficult stretches of road in the state, bridges the Tehachapi range of mountains and, it is estimated, will carry 3,950 vehicles daily.

Motorists using the new route, which is a cement concrete highway from seven to nine inches in thickness and 30 feet wide, will save from three-quarters of an hour to one and one-quarter hours in driving time.

Ceremonies, attended by the Governor, State Highway, county and city officials and thousands of motorists, will be held at "Channel Change" at French Flat, thirteen miles from the southerly end of the project, at 10:30 o'clock next Sunday morning. Gates at Gorman and Castaic will open at 10 o'clock for cars enroute to the state-wide celebration. Through traffic will be permitted to traverse the 26.85 miles of new high gear road after 2 o'clock.

TROJANS ARE HIGH HAT ACCORDING TO MARK KELLY

Mark Kelly, the Los Angeles sports writer, says the Trojans are not suffering so much from injuries as from a violent attack of "all-Americanitis."

That comes out of the feed box as the men of Troy are being whipped furiously by their coach, Howard Jones, in preparation for their clash with the Golden Bears in Berkeley next Saturday. Trojan followers say "Beat the Bears and take the pot," which, interpreted, means they believe Stanford, Oregon, Notre Dame and Georgia can be taken.

Coach Jones refuses to come out with any blasts, but from sources close to him it is definitely stated he is much incensed at the attitude of certain of his players, who, suffering from "star complexes," have strutted a bit too much and assumed too cocky an attitude.

"SHOW BOAT" AT THE CURRAN THEATRE AROUSES INTEREST

The largest legitimate theatrical production ever presented in the West is scheduled as the inaugural fall attraction of the Curran Theatre in San Francisco, opening Monday night, October 30.

"Show Boat," with its eighteen scenes, 107 people and four carloads of scenery, is the spectacle which will be offered for the first time in this region. Perry Askam, Charlotte Lansing, Estelle Taylor and William Kent have the leading roles in the stage version of Edna Ferber's famous book. In other roles are Nina Olivette, Billy Wayne, Cecil Cunningham, Kenneth Spencer and Hattie McDaniel.

"Show Boat," originally produced in New York and held there for two years, was revived only last season in the Eastern metropolis. Critics were loud in their praise of its "immortal" qaulities, saying that it would outlive any contemporary piece of operetta writing.

Edgar MacGregor is responsible for the direction of the new production, under the sponsorship of Belasco, Curran and Lang. Herman Heller has arranged the music and will conduct. Pearl Eaton is credited with the dances, which cover every era from the "gay nineties" to 1933. "Bill," "Can't Help Lovin' That Man," "Old Man River," and "Only Make Believe" are included in the thirty-two song hits.

STATE SALES TAX BRINGING IN IMMENSE SUM WEEKLY

Evidencing a decided upturn in California business, receipts under the state 2½ per cent sales tax for the first short quarter—August and September—totaled $7,287,569.53, exclusive of deferred payments, it is announced by Fred E. Stewart, member of the State Board of Equalization.

When receipts pour in from the companies which have asked an extension of time, Stewart predicted that total income from the sales levy for the two month quarter would exceed the $8,000,000 mark.

Sign of Improvement

Significance of the current increase in carloadings of California, Nevada and Arizona, which in the September quarter showed the first increase of any quarterly period over the corresponding quarter of the previous year which has been shown in the last three years, is pointed out by the October issue of the Bank of America Business Review.

REDUCE ACCIDENTS WITH GOOD BRAKES

After showing a substantial decline in 1932, traffic accidents in the United States increased this summer and unless there is a marked improvement for the remainder of the year the 1933 toll of fatalities will exceed the 1932 total of 29,500 persons who lost their lives in street and highway accidents.

This situation, based on nationwide figures, is cited by the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association in a statement urging motorists to attend to the condition of their brakes. The motorist organization is co-operating with the California Committee on Public Safety in a statewide campaign this month on the subject of safe brakes. The Committee's slogan for the month is, "Your Life's at Stake With a Faulty Brake."

The motorist who fails to properly maintain his brakes not only risks his own life but endangers others and adds to conditions that hamper the cause of safety, the statement continues.

Inspection of brakes should be done regularly and thoroughly, it is pointed out. If a car has not been given any great amount of use a simple adjustment of the brakes may be all that is required. But after a car has been in use for a considerable period during which no attention has been given to the brakes there are a number of defects which may have developed.

There should be a careful inspection of wheel bearings, because loose bearings affect the brake adjustment. Misalignment of wheels play a part by making a correct adjustment difficult, and loose spring shackles and U bolts also have this effect. All moving parts of the brake mechanism should be snug. Worn anchor pins and clevis pins should be replaced.

Brake linings should be free from all foreign substances or grease and badly worn linings should be replaced. Brake adjusting, repairing, and equalizing should never be entrusted to an unskilled person.

It's a decided disadvantage to have a shop on a street at the foot of a steep hill, according to R. J. McCann of Seattle, who complained to police: "Five parked cars have slipped their brakes and come crashing downhill through the front of the McCann Printing Company. That's too many. There ought to be a law."

About one-half of the government's $3,300,000,000 fund for public works has been allocated by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, but few men have been put to work on the approved projects, because of delays in making plans and specifications, letting contracts, and so on. Nearly every state and local community is scrambling to get its share of this vast sum available in Uncle Sam's grab bag.

Add to the roll of real heroes the name of Herbert Brown, a former soldier suffering from tuberculosis at Baton Rouge, La. Interested in the frenzied researches being made to find the cause and cure of the sleeping sickness which has claimed many victims recently, Brown offered himself as a subject of experiments, saying: "I can not hope to live long; I can not work and would like to do something useful for the world before I die."

FORLORN ISLAND

They were under way in three hours. Of Eric's five mates, all but two had deserted, but it was a good riddance. Big Smith returned to join his brother. Guiltless of any crime of blood, Petroff bargained with Nelson for passage to the Kuril islands. The Chelsea cruised round the shoal, and at noon of the next day, Eric was on her bridge, spying for the pass.

The search was long and nerve-wracking, but he remembered the approximate latitude of the mile-wide gap in the reefs, and another twenty-four hours found the trader safely through into deep water, heading for Forlorn island.

Nan looked often to the deep in the three days of Eric's absence, and was first to see the Chelsea's masts prick the sky line. The sight seemed to break the last thread of her self-control. Sobbing, she ran to Horton's hut; but she could not speak, and could only beckon her friends to the beach. . . . It was true. The ship was coming in. Deliverance . . . fulfillment . . . home. . . .

While the Aleuts gazed darkly, the castaways leaped into the nearest boats and sped to met the ship. Cheering, laughing with streaming eyes, weeping with smiling lips, they paddled alongside until the anchor dropped, then boarded and held revelry on the deck. Even Petroff and Big Smith shared in the reunion. It was a sight new to Captain Nelson's eyes: a millionaire and his family out of their minds with rapture, embracing him and his grinning sailors, and dancing hand in hand with cut-throats. It was a complete breakdown of civilized reserve. Even Roy caught the general contagion and danced a wild hornpipe on the deck.

Horton wanted to leave at once, but Nan remembered her humble friends forsaken on the bleak shore. "Of course we must tell them good-by," Horton said contritely. "Oh, if we only had some presents to give them—"

"De hold of dis ship is clean full of presents," Nelson told him.

"Would—would you let us have some of 'em?" Horton spoke in faltering tones.

"Sure. All you want."

The flush of excitement on Horton's face swiftly died away; he seemed to remember something. . . . His trembling hand dove into his pocket, felt his talisman, and came out steady and strong.

"Of course. This is a trading ship." There was a clang in his voice that silenced Nan, and made Eric whirl. "Captain Nelson, I want to buy a thousand dollars' worth of your goods to give the natives. Eric, here, will know what they want worst; he's been looking after them. Steel knives, axes, rifles, sweets and the like, everything that will make them happy."

The boats were loaded to the gunwales, such a treasure as the tribe had never dreamed, and the gifts taken to the beach and distributed amid an awed silence. From now on, life would not be so hard behind the shoals. Every squaw would wax fat from the great killings made with steel-pointed spears and firearms. Now that the pass was known, perhaps a little schooner would steal in once a year, to trade the white man's luxuries for pelts, elderdown, and fossil ivory. Yet by the same tokens, the doom of the Lost People was sealed. In the end they must either migrate to the larger Aleutian islands, surrender their tribal identity and become cannery workers under the white man's law, or perish victims of his civilization. The latter was more likely; it would be hard for them to leave the crags and windy beaches of Forlorn island.

They only grunted when the pale-faces bade them goodby, eyes unlit and brown faces impassive as their own sand dunes, but when in a dreamy silence the ship's boats glided away into the harbor, their strange lonely souls gave voice. On the beach an old crone struck up a wavering chant. All her people joined in, a weird song of farewell in the minor key that might have been brought from the lost Asiatic birthplace beyond the setting sun, possibly a dirge springing extempore from their savage hearts. Their arms swung in rhythm. Finally they dropped on their knees, and with imploring hands lifted to the skies, called on their tribal gods to give safe passage to their departing friends.

"Kou-yudam Agougou! Achidan Agougou!" This was repeated again and again. "Sitkoug—kouyou-dah, kouyou-dah."

The song died away. Awe-struck, the sailors rested on their oars. Eric looked into Nan's eyes to find them brimming with tears.

"Why must we leave them here?" she whispered.

"Where could we take them, that they'd be better off? This is their home."

"But it's so lonely, so dreary. I can't bear to think of it. Let's go quickly."

But now Mother Horton had struck up the heart song of the pale-faces, and even the Chelsea sailors joined in. Across the water the old strains swelled:

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
and never brought to mind?
We'll fill a cup of kindness yet, for days of auld lang syne.

The oars flashed. The crowd on the beach dwindled to black dots in the shadow of the crags.

* * * * * * *

It was still rough fare for the castaways. The three women would occupy the captain's cabin; the others were given bunks below decks. But great changes impended: Eric gazed southward with troubled eyes. Only two hundred miles through the Aleutian chain lay the well-charted sea-lanes of the north Pacific, and beyond the port lights were shining.

The dream was passing, just as Nan had foretold. Horton was among the first to waken, with nervous, fumbling hands he removed his parka and donned the clothes of civilization saved from the wreck, a rumpled blue suit and a yachtsman's cap still trig and smart. But presently his leaping heart beat steady and cool. After a reassuring touch of the little leathern book in his pocket, he made for the pilot house. Eric and Nelson were looking at charts, but he pushed boldly between them.

Eric glanced up with narrowed eyes. Not only Horton's clothes but his face was changed. His sagging jaw was set, his expression confident and resolute.

"Nelson, we're not very far north from the Great Circle route to the Orient, are we?" he began.

Nelson came to attention. "Yust about a day's run, if we hit straight t'rough de Aleut chain."

"I want you to intercept one of the big liners, and put us aboard. How soon do you think you could do it?"

"De Empress of Castile iss eastbound right now—only about eight hundred miles away. We heard her talking yust last night."

"Do you think you could catch her?"

"Wit' fair luck, yes. But—but de Empress, she do not stop at sea to take passengers from a packet like dis."

"She'll stop for me!" Horton spoke calmly. "Get in touch with her right away—tell her it's Felix Horton, and his party. Arrange to meet her in the shortest possible time."

Without a word to Eric, he wheeled and went out of the room.

"I Am Not Dead," She Spoke in Solemn Exultation. "I Am Not Asleep. I Am Alive."

* * * * * * *

The radio crackled. Changes came thick and fast. The Empress sped east—a clear 500 miles in 24 hours—and the little Chelsea dipped south nearly half that distance in the same time. They met in a sheet of sunlit water between curtains of mist, the liner's huge funnels looming against the sky. Grandly she hove to her many-storied castle; a boat was lowered, manned by trig-looking sailors.

For the passengers that lined her rail, this was higher romance than any they had found in the cherry-orchards of Japan. They saw the oars flash, and seven survivors of the Intrepid, given up for dead, clamber down the trader's ladder. . . . The middle-aged man in the yachting cap was Horton himself. They could see him plain through their shiny new binoculars, many of them had met him before. The old woman was his mother, a very eccentric old lady, so they whispered, and one of the girls his daughter. The younger yachtsman was Roy Stuart, believed to be Nan Horton's fiance; but no one knew the blond-headed man in the blue coat. Probably he was just one of the officers of the ill-starred Intrepid. The last two were no doubt the secretary and the maid, spoken of in the wireless bulletins. Further survivors of the wreck remained aboard the Chelsea. . . .

Cameras clicked and purred, the young people began to cheer. . . . The captain himself waited at the head of the stairs to greet Horton, presently the stewards were taking the party in charge. Horton and his friends went to the Queen's suite—the blond mate to the officers' quarters.

This was mid-afternoon. By eight in the evening Horton's party were ready to take their place in the care-free luxury of shipboard life. Friendly passengers and the ship shops had supplied them with every want. Bathed, valeted, manicured, only their wind-burned faces and red hands betrayed their long banishment. Lights were shining. Uniformed servants plied back and forth. Orchestras played in stately rooms. Forlorn island was no more than a gray dream in the faery seas of Keats.

When they went to dinner, the three Hortons and Roy were given seats at the captain's table. Eric, seated with the first officer, saw them come in, but although Nan's eyes raced around the crowded room, they did not meet his own. She was never so lovely, so alluring. Her form-fitting, red dinner gown revealed her girlish contours, and enchanced the dull glow of her cheeks. Her dusky hair, cut again in a long bob, was lustrous as sea-otter fur in the mellow light.

Horton and Roy were gay over their champagne glasses; Nan seemed quite grave. Often her gaze swept the hall, but still no glance passed between her and her lover—not one smile made h's cold heart leap. Had he won the island war, only to lose the prize? Was the great adventure all in vain? He would soon know. He would take his answer tonight, win or lose. When Nan rose from the table, he strode forward and touched her hand.

She whirled with a low cry, but before she could speak, Horton pushed between them.

"What is it, Eric?" Horton's tone was grave, but not unfriendly.

"I want to talk to Nan."

"You may, in a moment. I'd like to talk to you first. Come to my stateroom, Nan—you wait on the deck."

Presently they were seated in Horton's luxurious suite, the cool, confident millionaire and the grim, steady-eyed ship's officer. Horton offered him a cigar, but Eric declined it. He had not come here to make truce.

"I want to tell you, first of all, how indebted we all feel toward you," Horton began quietly. "You saved our lives on the island—and I'll not forget it, and I mean to stand behind you now. I propose for you to captain your own ship. Moreover, I'll always want you for my friend."

In the long pause, Eric's straight gaze did not waver, but Horton's cheek bones flushed.

"Now about Nan," Horton went on. "I've reserved a stateroom for her, adjoining mine. It is true that you and she went through a certain ceremony—under duress—but I can't regard it as a legal marriage, and I feel sure that she doesn't, either. It was only an Aleut rite. And she has never, I feel sure of this, really become your wife."

"Did she ask you to say this to me?"

"No, not in words. I think, however, I am carrying out her wishes. Eric, I want you to be reasonable about this—forget that empty form in the mud church, as quickly as possible. It will be better for her—and for you, too."

"That's for Nan to say, not you." Eric rose to his full height. "I'm going to talk to her."

Horton rose, too. "I advise against it. Her answer will be the same—and it will be keenly embarrassing for both of you. Later, when we are all home again, you may come to see her and try to win her. Although I think it better for a girl to marry in her own immediate sphere, I would have no objection to you as a son-in-law. But it must be brought about in the conventional way."

"I'm going to know, right now. I can stand the embarrassment, and so can she. Unless she herself says otherwise—she is my wife."

He strode out, to find Nan waiting by the rail. On the boat deck, under the waning moon, they found a secluded corner. But at first his tense throat could not shape his question; the long-drawn seconds fell and wasted one by one. At last she touched his hand.

"What did you want to say to me, Eric?"

"I want to know whether we are going on together—or part. There can't be any half-way. You must make up your mind now."

"Did father speak about the ceremony on the island?"

"Yes. He hinted that you didn't consider it binding."

"That's true. I can't feel that I'm your wife. It was only a savage rite, and I think we may as well consider it annulled."

The moonlight died in Eric's eyes. "That's all I need to know." He turned as though to go.

But her hand fell lightly on his arm. "But Eric—you might like to know that I'm going to be really married tonight, by the captain of the ship, provided the man I want will take me. . . . And I think he will."

"He'll take you—but he'll never love you as I love you." Eric spoke in the grave, slow way she knew of old, in sorrow, not in bitterness. "I don't blame you, Nan. You warned me all the time. I suppose it was inevitable that you'd decide on Roy, as soon as you got back to your own world."

The girl smiled dimly, and a starry shine was in her eyes. "This is not my world."

Something in her tone shot an electric current through every fiber of his body and soul. It paralyzed his heart and rustled up his hair. "I—I—don't understand—"

"I am not dead." She spoke in solemn exultation. "I am not asleep. I am alive."

He stared in dazed wonder. "Don't make me hope, and then let me fall," he begged. "You—you mean Roy—don't you?"

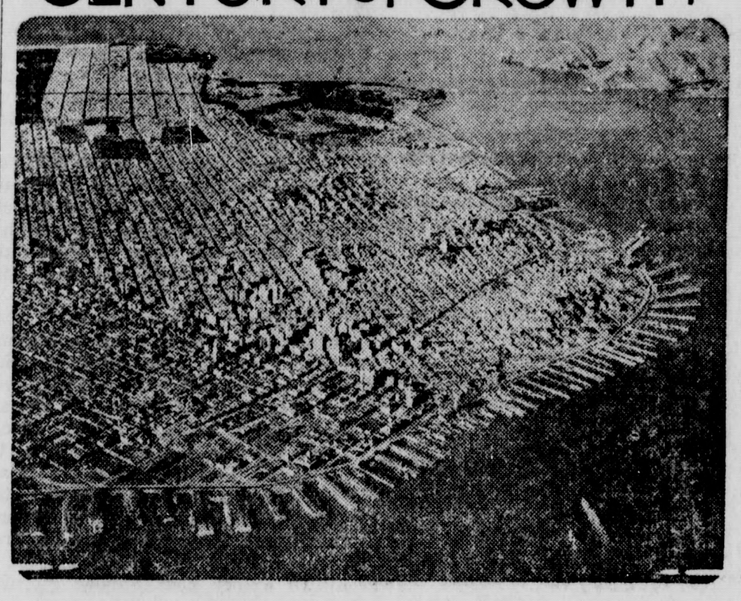
"I mean you—you—no one in this world but you." Hungrily her warm arms crept about him, and her eager lips pressed his. "Don't you understand now? Hold me, Eric, and don't ever let me go."

His old mother, the Sea, would die in her bed, and his father, the great North, would wear chains on his strong free limbs, before he would let her go—here or in Valhalla. . . .

Young love . . . romance . . . rapture . . . victory. . . .

[THE END.]

CENTURY of GROWTH



San Francisco Seen From the Air.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

EVEN one with the wildest imagination finds it difficult, while strolling down San Francisco's Market street, or Chicago's Michigan boulevard, to visualize the former city as a sleepy Mexican village and the latter as a tiny frontier town around a stockade-encircled fort a century ago.

Then the Mississippi was "way out West." It was as late as 1792 that separate statehood made the momentous first step west of the Alleghenies, as Kentucky's lines ran out in their own right (the area had been a part of Virginia), the first state to reach the once remote river.

With the beginning of the Nineteenth century, however, the Union seriously took up the real estate business in a large way.

Ohio's outlines had barely taken map form in 1803 when a huge territory was pegged out for future states, the Louisiana Purchase, which more than doubled the area of the original Union.

This taking over of 909,130 square miles by the stroke of a pen was probably the greatest real estate transaction in all history. For this potential empire the United States paid France in all—principal, interest, and debts assumed—$23,213,567.73. It works out at a little less than 4 cents an acre!

The purchase was a happy accident—a bit of high-handed patriotism that lawyers have said "strained the Constitution."

Robert R. Livingston was sent in 1801 by the United States as minister to France to attempt to buy the "Island of New Orleans," on both sides of the Mississippi, and so to gain control of the mouth of the river. He was authorized to offer $2,000,000 and, if necessary, to go as high as $10,000,000 for the patch of land.

Negotiations dragged on for two years, when suddenly war was declared on France by Great Britain. More to embarrass Great Britain than to accommodate the United States, Napoleon decided to sell the entire Louisiana territory. The historic decision was reached while the first consul was in his bath.

Napoleon Decides to Sell.

James Monroe had joined Livingston as a special commissioner, and to them was made the proposal to sell. The French negotiators asked $15,000,000—an amount once and a half as great as the highest authorized figure.

The two Americans were aghast. Cables and steamships did not exist. To get word to America and an answer back would require many weeks. Napoleon was in a hurry. So the two envoys figuratively threw their instructions out the window and signed the agreement.

Nobody knew enough about the new domain west of the Mississippi to draw an intelligible map of it. They knew only that there were prairies and "deserts"; that beyond were mountains of some sort; and that somewhere farther on, maybe hundreds, maybe thousands of leagues away, lay the half mythical South sea.

Lewis and Clark, and soon after them Capt. Zebulon Pike, struck into the new country to see what it was like, and as a result of their explorations Americans began to learn a few things about their vast West.

When Powell led his party of adventurers by boat down the Colorado river, in 1869, they were the first to navigate the stream through its long canyons, although the early Spanish explorers had seen the Grand canyon from above 300 years before.

The Florida Purchase, in 1819, involved a relatively small area. That acquisition really made the United States smaller than it was before. The treaty with Spain definitely marked the eastern and northern Spanish boundary all the way from the southeast point of Texas to the northwest point of California.

Parts of present Oklahoma, Kansas and Colorado, draining to the Arkansas—areas which had been thought to be in the Louisiana territory—were lost to the United States by the treaty and had to be bought back from Texas later.

More territory came to the United States in the decade 1840-1850 than during any other ten years in its history. Texas was added in 1845; the title to Oregon territory was established by treaty with Great Britain the following year; and the cession from Mexico in 1848, at the close of the Mexican war, brought in the California country and all the region east to Texas. In all, the forties added to the United States map more than 1,200,000 square miles of territory—an area larger than 20 Floridas.

Taking in Texas.

The Texas addition was unique. Texas had existed for nearly ten years as an independent republic, with diplomatic representatives in Washington and at European courts and with foreign ministers in its own capital. A separate nation entered the Union, the only case of the sort in United States history. More than 388,000 square miles of territory were added by the Texas accession.

There was rejoicing when the Oregon matter was settled, even though the "Fifty-four-forty or fight" slogan was not lived up to. Here was a shining mile-post in the history of the United States. In 70 years from the Declaration of Independence the new nation had pushed across nearly 3,000 miles of virgin territory, had brought almost half of it into statehood, and had marked the other half for future development.

Balboa's hazy sea had become the incontrovertible Pacific, and in that mighty ocean the United States had now taken the first step to establish its vital interest.

After the California country (including the present Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, and part of Colorado) became United States territory, in 1848, the developments that mean map changes came to the Far West with dizzy speed. One of the world's greatest gold rushes started in '49. By 1850 so many people had poured in that California was made a state.

This was another outstanding milestone. Statehood had hurdled hundreds of miles of territory and had made its first appearance on the shores of the Pacific.

By 1850 railway trains were puffing back and forth from Massachusetts to Georgia, and even west of the Alleghenies; yet California still was farther out of travel reach with the seat of government than even the remotest of the thirteen original states had been in the days of Thomas Jefferson.

Nearly All of It Bought.

In almost every important addition to its territory which the United States has made, save Oregon territory, a money payment has played a part.

The Louisiana Purchase cost $23,213,567.73; Florida cost $6,674,057.47, including interest; Texas and its creditors were paid $15,496,447.77 to relinquish claim to lands outside the present state boundaries; Mexico was given $16,295,148.89 for its cession of territory in 1848.

In 1854 the final addition was made to continental United States as it now exists, when the Gadsden Purchase was made of 29,670 square miles south of the Gila river, in Arizona. For this tract $10,000,000 was paid to Mexico.

These five accessions to the United States proper cost $71,679,221.86.

A circle with a radius of only 1,000 feet drawn around the business center of Washington, D. C., incloses land assessed for almost exactly the amount paid for this far-spreading empire.

Territory outside the borders of continental United States bought since 1854 was more costly. Russia was paid $7,200,000 for Alaska in 1867; the Hawaiian national debt of $4,000,000 was assumed when the islands were annexed, in 1898; Spain was given $20,100,000 for islands annexed after the Spanish-American war.

The ten-mile strip of the Canal zone in Panama has cost the United States so far $15,000,000 paid to Panama and $25,000,000 paid to Colombia. In addition, the United States paid $40,000,000 to the New Panama Canal company of France. And Panama continues to receive $250,000 annually.

The latest territorial purchase by the United States was the Virgin islands. For the 133 square miles of these Caribbean islands Denmark received $25,000,000 in 1916. That works out approximately $294 an acre—7,350 times the acre price paid for the Louisiana Purchase.

The total payments for outlying territory made since 1854 amount to $136,300,000.

These payments have all been in cash. Barter and land trades have never played a part in the growth of United States territory, as they did with the Dutch, who purchased Manhattan island for $24 worth of trinkets; and the English, who later got all Dutch claims to Manhattan and the rest of New York state in trade for what is now Dutch Guiana.

How I Broke Into The Movies

BY BUDDY ROGERS

I STARTED out to be a journalist, I wanted to head my own jazz orchestra, I became a motion picture star.

When I was eight years old, the leader of our town band in Olathe, Kan., organized a boy's orchestra and invited me to join. My father bought me a baritone horn.

By my eleventh birthday I was promoted to the men's orchestra. By my senior year in high school, I had firmly decided to become a theatrical jazz band leader.

The following year, I entered the University of Kansas, majoring in journalism. Outside of class, however, I played in a dance orchestra, and was mastering the trombone, the trumpet and the other brass instruments on down the line.

The summer of my sophomore year, thirty of us from the university went to Europe as deck hands on a steamer carrying mules. A few of us organized an orchestra and practiced after the mules had been bedded down for the night. Upon docking at Barcelona, Spain, we played in that country and then went to Paris, France, where we played in some of the cafes and night clubs. Our orchestra was a success.

By the time we returned to America and the new school year had started, Paramount was organizing its picture school at Long Island and was recruiting promising young men and women from all over the country.

Our theater manager in Olathe insisted that I call at the Paramount exchange in Kansas City. He even sent in some of my pictures. I went back to school, however, and forgot all about our conversation until I received a wire from Kansas City asking me to report for screen tests.

These tests will always linger in my mind as a nightmare. In a public Kansas City park before a number of curious bystanders I was told to register hate, fear and so on to tender love. I had to jump, leap and run. Close-up after close-up was taken of me until I was exhausted. I felt confident that I had failed dismally.

So I went back to my school and jazz band, counting the tests merely as an unpleasant experience and a waste of time. In a few weeks, however, I received word that I had been accepted for the school.

Along with the opportunity to enter the school came an invitation to tour Europe with a college orchestra for the summer. To take one offer meant to give up the other. I wanted to do both things. In the face of two such excellent chances, I did not know what to do. Upon the advice of none other than Jesse L. Lasky, I declined membership in the orchestra and reported at the Paramount school.

In the graduation picture, "Fascinating Youth," I was awarded the male lead. Following the picture, I was sent to the west coast, but before I could be cast in a picture there, I received word from the East to return for a part in, "So's Your Old Man."

After that I received one of those fabulously rare things, a "break." I had been cast as the hero in "Wings."

Lois Weber Won Fame as "Discoverer" of Stars

Lois Weber, one of the three women who attained success as film directors—the other two being Dorothy Arzner and Dorothy Davenport (Mrs. Wallace Reid)—is known as the "discoverer" of Ella Hall, Mary Maclarin, Cleo Ridgeley, Claire Windsor, and Billy Dove.

Miss Weber is the canny person who gave Claire Windsor her professional name when the blond beauty, then a newcomer, tried to crash the gates under the name of Ola Cronk. Once an actress in New York, Miss Weber entered films in 1912 and worked at the old Gaumont studio. One of the films she directed was Pavlowa's "Blind Girl."

She married Capt. Harry Gantz in 1926, when her personal fortune from her movie earnings and Hollywood real estate ventures had ascended near the million mark, and retired from pictures until her return from a recent world cruise. Universal hopes to profit by her ability to pick out promising talent for new stars.

THE DALY CITY SPORT PARADE

By H. KALININ

Jeffernson Indian gridders finally got under way last Friday to defeat South City, their traditional rivals, to the tune of 7-0. The contest, played on the Indian field, was a return game, South City winning the first by the same score. One of the largest crowds of the season came out to witness the two rivals battle, and what a game they saw. Thrill after thrill kept the spectators on their feet throughout the game.

Large gains by the Indians, featuring Roy "Red" Burns, and the goal line defence by South City that was only penetrated by the Indians once when they sent Roy Beecher to a touchdown, were the high spots of the game.

Time after time the Indians passed and plunged the pigskin down the field, only to be stopped at the goal line.

On the line for Jefferson, Dowdell, Fifer and Swan were outstanding, smearing South City's plays to great advantage. A lot of credit is due Dave Johnston, left half for the Indians. It was due to his stellar blocking that his team was able to score. Quite a fellow by nature, Dave is not very noticeable on the football field, but he is in on evry play.

It was a mighty fine game, one of the cleanest contests we witnessed this season, and the best team won. Three cheers for the Indians and their Coach, B. I.

Today the Indians meet Santa Clara high school on the home field. This promises to be a close contest, as the teams are evenly matched. We ask you to come out and root for the home team. The game will start at 3:30 P. M.

The Colma Merchants lost their second game of the season last Sunday. Playing against the Municipal Railway the local boys found themselves playing against veterans that should be playing in class "A." Even at that the Merchants were able to put across ten runs to the opponents' twelve. Evanson led the attack with a triple and two singles.

Jefferson Cardinals, playing now under the name of the Blue Eagles, won their second league contest last Sunday. This football team, consisting principally of former stars of Jefferson high school, are leading the San Franicsco amateur football league with two wins and no defeats.

Last Sunday's game was played on the old Presidio field, the Eagles defeating the strong Bayview team by the score of 16 to 8. The Eagles scored twice. In the first quarter Joe Millett picked up a blocked kick and raced 30 yards to score, and in the second period when a pass over the goal line from Gomez to Kalinin was complete. Late in the third quarter Fifer broks through the Bayview line to block a kick that resulted in a safety and two more points for the Blue Eagles. The Bayview team scored on a long pass in the third period and added two points when the Eagles' man was caught behind his own goal line.

The Blue Eagles play tthe Park-Presidio Merchants at 10 A. M., Sunday, at the Golden Gate Park stadium. The Eagles are entering the game as underdogs and are not conceded much chance of winning. However, Coach Sorelle feels confident of his Blue Eagles.

An Associated Press dispatch tells of one citizen who has kicked over the traces in protest against the N. R. A. Ben A. Pearsall, head of a dairy product firm at Elgin, Illinois, employing about a hundred workers, annonuced that he would close his plant. He expressed the opinion that the N. R. A. was "all coercion and fear, bluff and boycott," and that he would go out of business "until it blows over."

WOODROW WILSON-VISTA GRANDE P. T. A.

The Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Association is in the midst of a membership drive. It is the aim to hold their place as the largest unit in the Seventeenth District. There are two teams, headed by Mrs. Callahan for the Gold side, and Mrs. Sorg for the Blue side. A great deal of interest and competition has been aroused and good results are expected.

The Unit is assisting Mrs. Lillian Landini, who is holding a musical tea for the benefit of the district, on Monday afternoon, November 6, from 1:30 to 4:30. Those serving on the committee are President Norma Andersen, Vice-President Maude Hanselman. Corresponding Secretary Mrs. Rae, Recording Secretary Pearl Jones, Delegates Edith Barker and Ann Legge. Everyone is urged to attend and we are sure it will be a pleasant afternoon.

The regular meeting of the Seventeenth District was held in the Burlingame high school last Friday. There were several guests speakers during the sessions. Mrs. Lash, study group chairman, introduced Mrs. Ira Glassman, who gave some helpful suggestions on the study problems pertaining to the child.

Dr. Lillian Martin, age 82 years, but a brilliant psycologist, gave the most interesting talk on "Salvaging Old Age." Afterwards she conducted a round table which was very interesting as well as helpful. Mr. Garbett, of the National Broadcasting Company, gave a short educational talk. Those attending from this Unit were Maude Hanselman, Grace Hill, Edith Barker, Virginia Callsen and Marguerite Woodside.

At thirteen years of age, Evelyn de Biase of Brooklyn recently announced the invention of an electrical machine that rocks a cradle and plays a phonograph to sing the baby to sleep.

HEALTH OFFICER SUSPENDED BY COUNTY SUPERVISORS

The San Mateo county supervisors, at their meeting last Monday, suspended Dr. Harold E. Morrison from the office of county health director, and ordered him to appear for public hearing before the board Thursday morning at 10 o'clock on charges preferrred by County Executive Walter T. Kellogg.

Kellogg presented his charges against Dr. Morrison to the board in the form of a communication, and asked that the health director be dismissed from the county service.

Granting of a garbage-dumping permit to San Francisco for the deposit of refuse at Mills field was delayed two weeks, following a protest filed by Harry Collier, Burlingame.

Members of the Brisbane Fire Department appeared before the board and demanded that Joseph Miller be named fire commissioner in place of Tom Slate, the selection of Supervisor Witt. Action was delayed.

The supervisors made their first application for federal relief money. On the basis of $87,000 spent by the county in the past three months, the board applied for $29,000, a third of the local expenditure.

County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman was faced with a real financial problem, when the board refused to consolidate county precincts for the coming special election. Hinman had informed the board there was little money for tthe special election, but his consolidation plan did not meet with favor.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY

"We must all recognize and sympathize with the profound difficulty of adjusting the habits and prejudices of a life time to the requirements of a national emergency," declared John B. Elliott, member of President Roosevelts' National Recovery Administration Advisory Board endorsing the "Now is the Time to Buy" drive.

"The times demand not only courage and sacrifice but also intelligent action based on an understanding that the cause of the depression lie "not in our stars but in ourselves."

"The President is determined to help in every way he can. The National Industrial Recovery Act was written in the confident belief that the great majority of business men are ready to take intelligent action, to accept their responsibilities courageously, and to co-operate with their fellows and with their government in accomplishing the purposes of this law. Maintaining reasonable prices is one of the most important of these purposes."

"One of the primary intentions of the law is to avoid any necessity for government control of business; to encourage private initiative, to rely on self-discipline; to put faith in voluntary, collective agreements as the means of fixing and stabilizing human relations in and between units of industry. It will be only the failure of our industrial leadership to accept its great opportunity for self-service combined with public service, which may bring into play and make necessary the exercise of those reserved powers of goverment which are described as dictatorial, but which are in fact only powers of self-preservation."

THE MINING REVIVAL

During 1933 there has been a gradual, yet definite, improvement in the position of the copper industry. From a low of four cents a pound reached in December, 1932, the price has steadily advanced to about eight cents—a price which, at this writing, shows no signs of weakening. And the news recently came out that copper producers and smelters are reaching an agreement on a code that will doubtless do much to further improve and stabilize the industry.

If the mining depression is at last coming to an end, there will be cheering in many states. In the west especially, the base metals furnished employment and created purchasing power on an almost unequaled scale. Whole states were developed because of the mines—regions were opened up that would be wilderness still had there been no metal deposits in their fastnesses.

More jobs, higer living standards, a better break for all concerned—that is what mining revival means. Here's to it.

INCREASING ACTIVITY

Industrial activity, in spite of the appearance of some downward tendencies, is continuing at a comparatively high rate. In August, production was more than fifty per cent greater than in August, 1932. In July, production reached its peak, when it was equal to the 1923-25 average.

Price advances, which started with the first manifestation of recovery, continued through September. The cost of living has accordingly risen. An exception to the general trend is farm prices, which have declined. One of the best of recent signs is that the wide discrepancy between production and consumption, which confused the outlook a short time ago, is narrowing.

NEW ERA IN HOME BUILDING

From the standpoint of today's homebuilder, the depression has produced one good result.

According to a news item from Seattle, building has acquired a new status in the last three years. Architects and contractors agree that it will never go back to the old basis. The principal change has been in the degree of discrimination developed by the prospective builder and buyer. He may be buying a very inexpensive place—but he has learned to demand beauty and artistry and good workmanship and materials. It is doubtful, as the news item observes, if the old jack-knife carpenter and the contractor who threw up a number of jerry-built homes as a speculation, will have a place in the new order.

What is true in Washington is true, to a greater or lesser degree, elsewhere.

There has never been a better time for building a new home or rebuilding the old one—never a time when we could get so much, both in materials and in expert advice, as at present. The buyer's market still exists the price rises that have occurred recently are as nothing to the price rises that are coming.

Classified as bicycles and therefore tax-free, three-wheeled autos that develop speeds close to 50 miles per hour have been produced in Germany.

AMERICAN LEGION DISTRICT MEETING

The Eighth District of the American Legion, which comprises the entire county of San Mateo and part of San Francisco, held its first district meeting of the year, Friday night in Burlingame Legion Hall, with Richard L. Crane, Commander of the District, presiding. A large number of officers of the Legion were present. Dr. A. C. Carleton spoke on 1934 convention and armistice day celebration. Commander R. L. Crane stressed membership and feels, from the indication already shown, that the district will be again on top of the list. In the absence of T. Louis Chess, chairman of new posts committee, Carl Hermann reported on the latest post in Millbrae, and hopes soon to announce the addition of another post. Many enthusiastic remarks were made and posts all agreed to take an active part in the 1934 convention, which will be held in San Francisco. On December 15, in the war memorial building, there will be a joint district meeting, seventh and eighth district, at which Homer Chaillaux, state commander, will make an address. Following the meeting, Burlingame Post 163 served refreshments.

"UTILITY TAXES take State out of the red"

THAT was the headline which many newspapers used for an article sent out in news dispatches from Sacramento on September 20th.

State Controller Ray L. Riley announced that day that payment of Seventeen Million Dollars in taxes by California utilities had given the state's general fund a favorable balance for the first time in many months.

It permitted him to return three million five hundred and fifty thousand dollars which had been borrowed from the highway fund to avoid the registration of general fund warrants.

This is merely one indication of the importance of your utilities to your state.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20.—(LP)—Payment of $17,000,000 in taxes by California utilities resulted in the state's general fund showing a favorable balance for the first time in many months, State Controller Ray L. Riley announced today.

With receipt of the public utility tax payments, Riley immediately ordered return to the highway fund of $3,550,000 borrowed to avoid registration of general fund warrants. This transfer reduced to $3,400,000 the general fund's debt to special funds.

The above refers to the first payment made to the state's general fund for the fiscal year 1933-1934. A second payment will be made in March.

Out of every dollar you pay to Pacific Gas and Electric Company for your electric service, 14.5 cents represents taxes. Of this 14.5 cents, 9 cents goes to the maintenance of your state government.

In the next two years the state's tax income from the utilities and the insurance companies will be $71,847,000. That is nearly 25 per cent of the state's total revenue. It is more than the $70,000,000, or 24 per cent, which is estimated to be obtained from the retail sales tax.

The utilities do their part—and a large part it is—in the support of the California state government.

Saving From Market Control

"Figured on the basis of actual savings, it is probably fair and conservative to estimate that the Tokay grape marketing control has already accomplished a net saving to the industry of at least $250,000." SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1933 NUMBER 14

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

District Attorney: "What possible excuse could you jurymen have for acquitting that bloody murderer?"

Juryman: "Insanity."

District Attorney: "What? The whole twelve of you?"

Cement, Rock, Sand, etc.

Mrs. Peck: "Henry, did you see anything in the paper about Mr. Blinker running over his mother-in-law?"

Mr. Peck: "Not yet. I haven't come to the sporting news."

The recipe for perpetual ignorance is to be satisfied with our own conclusions and content with our own knowledge.

"Dearest Rosalie," wrote Oswald, who was hopelessly in love, "I would swim the mighty ocean for one glance from your dear eyes. I would walk through a wall of flame for but one touch of your little hands. I would leap the widest stream in the world for a word from your lovely lips. As always, your Oswald.

P. S. I'll be over Saturday night, if it doesn't rain."

Lump Coal for the furnace. Hand picked.

A wise old owl sat in an oak. The more he heard, the less he spoke; the less he spoke, the more he heard—Why can't we all be like this bird?

"Just had a tussle with the dentist."

"And who came off best?"

"Well, I guess you would call it a draw."

"John, if I died would you marry again?"

"That is hardly a fair question, my dear."

"Why do you say that?"

"You wouldn't like to have me say yes, and to say never again wouldn't sound very nice."

When you are on the level, you are above the average.

Flubb: "I think I know the Miss Bleacham you spoke of. Her hair is a most decided blond type, isn't it?"

Dubb: "Well—er—yes, except that it's a little undecided about the roots."
